Slaughter was able to walk and unless pneumonia occurs he will recover. He has a very bad cold and sore throat. He denies linat he shot himself, but the wound is of such a nature that it was undoubtedly selfinflicted. He says he was down on his all-fours having fallen in getting over a fence when he was shot. One theory is that he fell down with his pistol in his hand and the weapon went off accidently. The pistol ball entered under his left jawbone and is believed to be under the scalp near the left temple. Slaughter can swallow liquids, but has not been fed on solids.

The details of the affair were correctly given in the last Kentuckian. The negro was not chased by a mob, as one sensational report claimed. One man was after him when he shot himself and he had a gun and no pistoi.

SLAUGHTER IS IN JAIL HERE. GOV. WILSON IS NOT LIKED.

Ohio Man is Allied With Wall Street.

John F. Bibie, wagon manufacturer, of Hopkinsville, Kentucky and Michigan, five times Mayor of Ionla. Mich., and at one time prominently mentioned as a running mate the city for several days on business with a boom for Governor Harmon for the Democratic Presidential nomination as a side ilne.

"I am not the authorized representative of Mr. Harmon, but a personal friend, having weekly letters from him, and promised to keep him informed of the political condition of the different sections during my travels, that have recently extended over several states in the West," said Mr. Bible at the Portland Hotel last night. "The last time I taiked with him he consented to permit me to tell one incident about him of which I was personally cognizant and I believe the time Is now ripe to tell it, as he is accused of being the candidate of Wall street and under its influences.

Revival of Road Recounted.

"While I was Mayor of Ionia, July 20, 1907, there was a wreck on the Pere Marquette Railroad in which 32 were killed and 183 injured, all residents of Ionia and riding on passes at the time. " Governor Harmon wa receiver of the road that had been forced into insolvency for stock-jobbing purposes. Every one of these cases was settled without litigation and it is a record for such classes of cases. The Pere Marquette road Through a misprint, the time for was a distinct Michigan enterprise the High School Oratorical Contest and its existence was of vital interest to the state. "After touring the country and making a careful study of the situation I am convinced that Harmon will receive the Democratic nomination. While an intimate friend of Mr. Bryan and have been his follower for years, I cannot follow him to Woodrow Wilson, as I feel toward him the same as Henry Watterson does. AMUSEMENTS

Then, too, the large number of pretty girls, the brilliant costuming, fine scenic effects, as well as the quality of the song introductions appeal strongly to the audiences. Novelty is said to be the prime factor in moving the fun features of "Gay New York" and this is some thing worth considering in these days of marvelous advancement.

examine him. His mother, Mrs. Julia Wood Harbeson, said her son had been erratic for some time, and believes his eccentricities were due to the many wounds he received in duels fought while he was a student at Kiel University, in Garmany. She said he fought thirty-seven duels and once was so seriously injured that a portion of his skull had to be cut away. She said he had plenty of money and his theft of bread was inexplicable, except in the light of his ill-health.

Measuring Light From Stars. Stariight has been measured in comparison with sunlight and the following results have been announced: The light received from a star of the first magnitude like Vega is about one forty-thousandth-million of the sun's Young places the total starlight received hy the earth at the value of 3,000 first magnitude stars, thus making the whole starlight to be one-sixtleth that ured in the lahoratory. It has been found that the sun's light in itself; presses against the earth with a force something like 70,000 tons. As the surface of a sphere varies as the square of the radius, and as the volume of mass varies as the cube of the radius, and as the mechanical pressure of light on the whole surface varies as that surface, and as the force of gravity varies as the massif a sphere were made smailer and smaller it is easily seen that the pressure of light would not decrease so fast as the force of gravity; so hodies beyond a curtain minuteness could not reach the sun, but would he repelied by the mechanical force of its light.

Auto Frightened Negro Mammy. "We had one rather ludicrous encounter which might have resulted in serious injury although it fortunately did not," said Mrs. Francis Boyd, in describing a recent trip through the south in an automobile.

"As we rounded a curve in crossing the mountains of Virginia, we saw approaching a wagon load of negro folks, drawn by a skinny borse that laboriously climbed toward us.

"In the group was a mother who. held a baby close to her breast. She evidently had never seen an automoblie before. "'O!' she shricked; 'it's a black

The Man That Does Things. "It is not the critic who countsnot the man who points out how the strong man stumbles, or where the doer of deeds could have done them better. The credit belongs to the man who is actually in the arena, whose face is marred by dust and sweat and blood, who strives valiantly; who errs and comes short again and again because there is no effort without error and shortcoming, but who does actually strive to do the deeds; who knows the great enthusiasm, the great devotions; who spends himself in a worth cause; who at the best knows in the end the triumph of high achievement and who at the worst, if he fails, at least fails while daring greatly, so that his place shall never be with those cold and timid souls who know neither victory nor defeat." -Roosevelt.

Milk for Flesh Reduction. The simplest article containing complete nourishment is milk. That is Dr. nite length of time. Mitchell's cure for obesity, but he puts his patients to bed while he gives it to them. An amount of milk sufficient for the rourishment of a healthy, active person presents digestive difficulties for many. It is not the simple liquid diet it seems, but presents a. solid mass of curds in the stomach. Lime water makes it more digestible. In the form of buttermilk, it is easier to digest and makes a very effective "What was the matter with her?" reduction diet. A FINE LINE OF COPY- RIGHTED ART CALENDARS.

The plans for your advertising campaign this year should by all means include a handsome Art Advertising Calendar for 1913. We have secured the exclusive agency for the Copyrighted Calendars produced by the A. M. Collins Mfg. Co., of Philadelphia.

This is one of the largest and most substantial Calendar houses, in the United States, and the quality of their line is superior to that of any ever shown in this section.

This line will be handled exclusively by us in Christian and Trigg counties. It includes a great number and variety of subjects in full color, as well as some hand colored pictures of exceptional beauty.

The samples for 1913 will be in our hands shortly, and we shall be glad to show them to you at an early date. MAKE NO PLANS FOR YOUR 1913 CALENDAR UNTIL YOU SEE THIS EXTRAORDINARY LINE.

OLD COPY OF BACON'S ESSAYS.

Bacon's Essays, a copy of which realized £1,950 at the Huth sale, have a special title to fame. This, work was the first of any importance to be translated from English into French. The translation proved a great success. In his preface to tho third edition, Baudouin, the translator, complains that "at least four editions of this work would have been sold by now if the booksellers had not hampered its sale by their unwillingness to place it before the public." Still, the fact that three editions were called for within five years shows that the essays were heartily appreciated by French readers. The first French version of Shakespeare appeared in 1776—over 150 years after the translation of Bacon.—London Chronicle.

LCALL COMPANY, 239 to 340 West 374 BL, MAY TOUS

Melinda Chuffy fastened the fast to the side porch. Then she took her on to drive me over there because lamp and tiptoed softly upstairs very they would talk all the rest of their much as if she were afr id of awak- fives about it!" ing somebody—all of which was quite the blg house

She scurried down the dark hail, and stammed the door and locked it.

She placed the lamp on the tail chest of drawers and it cast a small oasis of light in the big room. Melinda fooked under the white-draped bed and arose refleved at the spick and span vacancy beneath the handsome nightgany structure; she peeped fearfully in the clothes press and screamed a little because a hlack shadowy something leaped out of the darkness and brushed her cheek -then it drifted back against the wall and proved to be nothing more than her hest black china silk gown which had been drawn forward by the draught from the opening door.

All her fears being quelled for the moment, Melinda Chuffy proceeded to go to hed although the clock on the mantel piece pointed only to haifpast eight. That was the way Melinda had done ever since her mother's death a year ago. She had always been a timid little thing and in spite of her better sense and the reproofs and admonitions of her parents and friends, Melinda went right on heing as timid as a little white if she waiked in the woods every crackling twig, every flurry of dead leaves, every rush of hird wings sent terror to her heart. She was afraid of cows and horses and mice and snakes and she like parrots and cats and flowers and everyhody said Melinda Chuffy was cut out for an old maid and Melinda really believed them and became more timid and shrinking than ever.

One or two intrepid youths had ventured to call upon Melinda preliminary to more serious attentions for Meiinda was sweet and pretty, but their visits had not exceeded a half dozen hefore they decided that Melinda Chuffy was eiher "struck-up" or too shy even to he amusing, so they stayed away and Mellnda was much relieved and went back to her cats and her canaries and her flowers, quite contented to he an old maid.

So the years had passed peacefully on until Melinda was now thirty-five. Ernest Bruce did not count in the list of suitors; he had merely been Melinda's playmate and next-door neighbor. It was Ernest who shielded her from gigantic cows and heiterskelter horses and wrigging snakes and creeping mice; Ernest never laughed at her fears and when they went through the wood, and he was heside her, he would hold her hand in his and reassure her terrified little mind until at the end of the wood she could look back and bid a quavering defiance to all the hogies she had left hehind.

The Bruces had moved out to Ohio while Melinda was small and so she had never seen her old playmate since hut she always thought of him with grateful tendencies.

She opened her windows wide, feeling secure in the knowledge that her shutters were firmly nailed to the silis, and she looked with confidence upon the newly-installed telephone that was beside her bed. That was Melinda's concession to living alone. With that instrument at hand she could call for asssistance at any hour, of the day or night.

So far, she had had no occasion to use the telephone except to speak to some friend or to transact her marketing on a rainy day, and now she was startled to hear the sharp, incisive summona of the beli at her elbow.

Melinda paused in the act of blowng out the candie and looked at the telephone as if it was some inanimate thing suddenly come to : life. "For goodness sake" she breathed

Again and again the bell jangled before Melinda | went softly over to the instrument and responded. "Helio!" she said in a weak voice. "Is this Miss Chuffy-Miss Melinda

Chuffy?" asked a woman's impatient

"Yes what do you want?" Meitada was reassured. "I am Mrs. Peterson of Woodside; there has been an automobile accident in front of my house and one of the injured men has mentioned that he was on the way to your house. The doctor says his injuries may prove fatal and it would he just as well for you to come at onceimmediately if you want to ase him alive."

Melinda was gasping. "But I don't know any such man," she protested. 'i certainly don't know a man who owns an automobile. You've made a mistake."

"if you are Miss Melinda Chuffy you must know a man by the name of Ernest Bruce-he said he was on the way to your house. That's all I've got time to say—there are several injured people here and if you know Mr. Bruce I would suppost that you come over and relieve me of his care!" and Mrs. Peterson of Woodinde. being in a highly nervous plate hung up the rely and Mellnda Chuffy, for II fir t II In her peaceful life was forc d to fice a real situation

" rn at Bruce' a'e repeated h lpluly. "I supple be has grown to be a man - I always think of him as a lillie boy hit h was older than l why was he coming here and what shall I do? At this time of night, loo-vet he is dving and there is no one to go to him not one of his folks window and locked the door leading is here and there is no one to call up-

As Melinda talked half hysterically upn cee ary as she was all aione in to her elf she was dressing rapidly, finally stipping into the coolness of her black china silk gown, "If I am her iamp flaring wiidly in a draught dressed in black no one can see me from some unexpected quarter and for the woods are dark," she shudshe darted into the big north cham- dered. "I must take my pink shawl ber which she occupied in summer -black would look awful to a dying man-it's so queer I can't think of Ernest as anything except a little

Quite forgetting to arange her lovely fair hair which hung in two long hraids over her shoulders, just as she had fixed it for the night, Melinda Chuffy, timid as a rabbit, fearful of her own shadow, hurried downstairs, locked the side door behind her and plunged into the velvet blackness of the night.

Woodside was a dairy farm and it was situated at the other end of the iong strip of woodland which had been Melinda's dread in childhood. The woods hordered her orchard on one side and through the wood was a wide, well-made road much used as a short cut hy automobiles in the daytime, but at night it was not lighted and had lost none of its terrors for Melinda Chuffy. Nevertheless, she made directly for the road, almost feeling her way until her feet were set on its hard smoothness. Then. driven by terror mingled with pity for her old playmate. Melinda fairly raced along the road, her eyes fixed on the black darkness before her.

As she ran Melinda Chuffy repeated over and over to berself a few words: "He never laughed at me when i was afraid-he always held my hand in these woods-I mustn't forget."

An owi booted and a whip-poor-will uttered his cry close beside her; insects of the night added their chorus. Twigs crackled, leaves flurried, and the wings of night-flying birds almost touched her as they passed. Bats flapped around her unprotected head and Melinda alternately prayed for protection and repeated over and again her broken words about Ernest Bruce and his loyalty.

At last she stumbled up the steps of the farmhouse and sank a crumpled little heap of black sitk, pink shawi and flaxen braids against the door. There the Petersons found her and carried her inside, adding another to the number of their patients.

As they carried her unconscious form into the sitting-room a tall, hroad-shouldered man with one arm in a sling, arose from the deep chair where he had been sitting. "Another one?" he exclaimed, and nen coming forward and looking Melinda's sweet pale face intently he stared up at the Petersons. "That must be Mellnda Chuffy!" he cried, taling their slender burden and laying it tenderly on a couch. "How came she here?"

Mrs. Peterson, a stout fair-haired woman; driven out of her few wits by the unfortunate accident of the , vening that had made her uneventful home a hospital, looked stupidly at him and shook her head.

"Miss Chuffy-why I guess I telephoned her to come to you at once-I said you were on your way to see her and dying and she must come without delay. You see, I made a mistake and got you mixed up with that other gentleman who is so hadly injured-your names were all strange to me and I did the best I could."

"Of course you did. Mrs. Peterson and we are all more than grateful," assured Ernest Bruce as he leaned over Melinda Chuffy whose white eyelids were flickering. "Do you suppose this little woman came all alone through those dark woods to see me?" he asked in an awed tone, hut there was no one to answer for the Petersons had departed for restoratives.

"Poor scared little Melinda," hreathed Ernest Bruce, kneeling heside his one-time playmate. "I wonder if you know that you are a true sport after all?" Melinda opened her eyes and icoked dreamily on the face so near her own, so like the face of the little boy she used to know.

"I got here in time, Ernie," she smiled tremblingly, contentedly , letting her hand rest in his firm grasp. "I came all the way here from Obio to ask you to marry me. Melinda," he whiapered, caressing one of her fair braids. "Somehow I couldn't fancy any giri but you after all these years and I was afraid to find that you were married after all."

Melinda blushed and strange to say she felt none of the shrinking that she had experienced with those other sultors. "I never-wanted-to marry anyhody-hefore-" she whispered shyly. "I guess I was waiting for Hopkinsville Missionary Gives Further Account of Life In Mission Field.

IN LAND OF WHITE ELEPHANT

This Time an Entertaining. Description of Yisit to Village of Bethlehem:

Chieng Mai, Laos, May 30, 1911.-Yesterday morning I, returned from a three days' stay at the village of Bethlehem, about ten miles from here. I went over Friday morning with Mrs. Collins and Marie, who will remain a week or so. . The village was formerly under the care of Mr. Collins, but since his return, he has been unable to resume his work there. This village is a great contrast to the one I visited the week before. The people are prosperous, have good homes and show the effect of schooling and training by the missionary. They were so giad to see us, and brought in more fruit, rice and meat than we could have consumed in a week.

We left the city Friday morning on horse-back, and after travelling about seven miles on the main road. we had to cut across the rice-fields for three or four miles. This was hard travelling, and will be a great deal worse when the rains set in. Now the fields are rough, and cracked from the heat; and every little while one comes to an artificial ditch, used to irrigate, that is bad for the horse to cross. We had to walk the horses all the way across this. A couple of men had met us at the roadside, to pilot us across the fields, and when we reached the viliage an the middle of a fairly large grove, to stay for the full six years. so we had no near neighbors to disurb us when we needed rest. BUY YOUR GROCERIES AT FORBES' IN 1912.

Why not make this one of your "resolutions" for the new year? You want to save all you can, of course; that's why we suggest that you come and try trading with us once. There are other reasons too --- and they are almost as important as the saving proposition. For instance---we have the newest and freshest stock of groceries in town, no old shelf-worn, dusty, dirty stuff; we buy in the largest quantities and pay spot cash for same. And as to our prices, although we "don't raise much fuss" about it, WE ALWAYS MEET COMPETITION on anything in our line. Now if you don't believe we do this, call us up at any time and see. We could give you many other reasons why we are "just as nice" as the other fellows, but we'd rather show you. So come give us a trial anyway.
